Practical Education For Better Citizens

Four years of fact-finding by the Canadian Research Committee on Practical Education have come to an end with the publication of its final report, entitled "Better Schooling for Canadian Youth."

This report, which was made public in booklet form last month at the annual convention of the Canadian Education Association, in Saskatoon, stressed throughout its pages that the aim of education is the development of good citizens.

"It should be kept in mind," the report reads, "that this involves assistance in the development of the child as a responsible member of society and as an independent individual. . . the school should seek to help the child develop those understandings, attitudes, habits, and skills that will enable him to become a well-integrated and socially responsible citizen who can think critically and independently about the problems of life."

One method of gaining these ends is through a more thorough study of the basic subjects, oral and written expression and arithmetic, which "are essential in all jobs and in all activities of everyday life." However, the report recommends, these basic subjects should be taught in such a manner that will permit them a natural application in employment and everyday activities.

Establishment of the Research Committee was suggested by the late Dr. Fletcher Peacock, then President of the Canadian Education Association, in 1946. Subsequent meetings among officials of the CEA and industrial, business and labour groups, which provided the finances for the study, produced the Committee on which all these groups were represented.

As a main part of its lengthy investigation of secondary schools, the Committee surveyed over 12,000 high school graduates and over 14,000 other students, who failed to complete their secondary education. The Committee also received reports from many employers of these young people and from the young people themselves two years after they had left school. The report notes two important findings from these surveys: (1) Sixty-five per cent of the pupils who enter Grade VII never graduate from high school; (2) The majority of the young people are lacking in ability to express themselves both orally and in writing and in the fundamentals of arithmetic.

Two other important recommendations embodied in the report are that the minimum legal school-leaving age, both urban and rural, be set at 16 years in all provinces, except in certain specific exemptions, and that community institutes should be established to provide part-time education for those between the ages of 16 and 18 years, and even for people of more mature ages. The reason for the latter recommendation is that education does not end when attendance at school ceases; today, education is recognized as a life-long process.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. J. Page who celebrated their 55th wedding anniversary Jan. 4.

Trucks have again resumed hauling gravel to the dam since the holidays and the road west of town once more the busiest in the country—along with the road that leads to the curling rink. The men's open bonspiel is now in progress with 28 teams entered from Milo and surrounding districts, such as Arrowwood, Vulcan, Reid Hill, Lomond, Armada, Shoultice and one rink from Swallowville skipped by Mr. W. Gore.

The United Ladies Aid and the Home and School Association have set up a joint lunch counter where they serve hamburgers, hot dogs, pie and coffee to the curlers.

Roy Haggins has had bad luck with his car recently. He ran in the ditch when his car failed to make the turn at the corner west of town, and later when he tried to warm the motor with hot ashes, the car caught fire. It was extinguished before extensive damage was done.

Your reporter will welcome any news from you.

UN Agency to Aid 'White-Collar' Workers

Non-manual workers now account for over 30 percent of the population in industrialized countries employed as wage-earners. The International Labor Organization has prepared a full description of the main problems affecting "white collar" workers which will be discussed by ILO's Advisory Committee on Salaried Employees and Professional Workers, due to meet next February. Here, Max Kaufmann, Chairman of the Committee, takes up the problem with ILO's Director-General David A. Morse, (center) and Assistant Director-General Luis Alvarado, at right.

THE QUESTION OF DAMP GRAIN

By H. G. L. Strange

One most serious difficulty that many farmers have to contend with this year is that of keeping the damp grain they have stored on their farms from spoiling or heating or going out of condition as it is technically termed, until it can be taken in by elevators and rushed to terminals where it can be properly dried. The greatest danger of this grain going out of condition will come next April and May when the weather warms up, and when of course the grain that is stored will also warm up and no doubt start heating. There is, however, danger now with any grain that was stored when the weather, and so the grain, was warm.

Our Universities and Provincial Governments and a number of individual farmers have already made many experiments to try out means of keeping this damp grain from heating. At the moment the results of most of these many experiments are not available, although some are. The "Crop Testing Plan" is collecting information from every source that is available and the results of it will in due course, and as quickly as possible, appear in this column. Meanwhile

Local Puck-chasers Lose To Okotoks

The Vulcan Intermediates lost by a score of 9-5 when they met the Okotoks sextet in a Foothills Hockey League fixture on the local ice Friday night, before a good crowd.

The first period saw four penalties with play inclined to be rough and rugged and Okotoks took a 4-2 lead. The second frame displayed a good brand of hockey but R. W. Cameron of Okotoks had his upper lip cut through with a high stick and Bobby Clayton, youthful Vulcan net minder, received a gash between the eyes from a deflected puck. Both players required several stitches and were attended by Dr. E. M. Gee.

The game was held up for some time while H. Spaeth substituted as goalie. Score at the end of the second was 5-4. Donald Mitchell also sustained a gashed leg.

Okotoks scored four more counters in the last stanza while Vulcan could only register one.

J. McKay and V. Taskay divided scoring honors with three goals each and Bruce Miller made many brilliant saves in the Okotoks net.

Line-ups:

Not a Good Law

A law can be called a good law only as long as it is supported and respected by the public. If the masses tend to close their eyes and attempt to circumvent a specific law by devious means, then there is usually something wrong with it. The final arbiters in evaluating the worth of any law are the people themselves, for whom laws are originated. Society recognizes the evil of murder, for example, and provides the maximum penalty for non-observance of the golden rule, "Thou Shalt Not Kill."

It is time our government authorities at Ottawa woke up to the fact that the people are laughing at the duty imposed on the importation of cigarettes, and are going to great lengths as lawbreakers to smuggle cigarettes into the country from the United States. In this case, there is nothing wrong in principle with customs tariffs, but there is something wrong with the tax on Canadian cigarettes which causes people to seek other channels for "smokes" rather than pay the dominion government what it considers to be an exorbitant tax.

Finance minister Abbott thought he could bleed the Canadian smoker of more money, by increasing the tax per pack of cigarettes and supplement the poor dominion treasury which shows a surplus of only a few hundred million dollars.

Instead, income from this source dropped off several millions due to consumer resistance. People just refused to pay the extra ante on cigarettes. What is worse, they took to showing their contempt for the law by entering and patronizing the black market on U.S. cigarettes which are being smuggled into Canada and sold at around 30 cents a pack. Most of those openly defying the law don't consider themselves to be real "law-breakers". It is their way of showing that they don't like the government's high-handed method of prying a few more pennies from the taxpayer.

The appearance of this illegal cigarette black market is the surest sign the public can convey to government that "something is wrong." Why in heaven's name doesn't Ottawa admit its mistake and repeal a bad law? —Lacombe Globe.

The Prairie Crocus is the emblem of Manitoba.

Apt for a province which boasts the Canadian Rockies, British Columbia has as its motto, "Splendor Without Diminishment."

Every freight train in Canada is a rolling lesson in geography of this Dominion and the continent, and its production and distribution, a train made up of cars of many railroads, carrying all types of products.

Infant Baptism

People often ask the question: "Why do not the churches of Christ baptize infants?" The basic answer is that it has no value.

The practice is based upon the assumption that infants are guilty of Adam's first sin, called 'original sin', and, therefore, since baptism is for the remission of sin, they must be baptized or lost in Hell. No one has ever found the scripture which asserts this or explained in what way they are guilty, nor have they given any reason why, if guilty of Adam's first sin, they are not equally guilty of the second, third, and indeed all of the sins of their ancestors. The scriptures teach that every man must bear his own sin.

The first mention of the practice in Christendom comes from Irenaeus who lived at the end of the second century, nearly two hundred years after Christ was on earth. Neander, the great European historian, said: "Irenaeus is the first church teacher in whom we find any allusion to infant baptism." There is not one word in the New Testament which in any way indicates that either it should be practiced or that it was practiced. Albert Bledsoe, well known for his writings, said: "With all our searching we have been unable to find, in the New Testament, a single express declaration, or word, in favor of infant baptism." According to Martin Luther, the great reformer, "It cannot be proved by the sacred scripture that infant baptism was instituted by Christ, or begun by the first Christians after the apostles." It is, therefore, of purely human origin.

Jesus said to the religious leaders of His day "In vain (without value) do men worship me, teaching for doctrines the precepts of men." And again "Thus have ye made the commandment of God of none effect by your tradition." (Matt. 15: 1-9.) These passages indicate that it is useless and contrary to the Divine will to bring into Divine religion practices and teachings which have not come from the will of God. If you have grieved over the loss of an infant because it was not baptised, you may rest your mind at ease.

CRAFTSMEN FROM ENGLAND

Many Canadian employers have turned to Great Britain to find craftsmen and technicians with the training and skills which are in short supply in Canada.

Almost all have been able to fill requirements through the agency of Sackville House, London, the Canadian Department of Labor's office in Great Britain. Since it was opened in 1948, this London office has served as a link between Canadian employers and overseas workers seeking jobs here.

The Canadian aircraft industry for example, faced with a large expansion program, has obtained from Britain many of the skilled tradesmen needed for the preliminary tooling-up on which depends the employment of hundreds of production workers. During the past summer, other employers have obtained, with the help of the London office, specially qualified scientists, engineers and tradesmen, in groups of 15 to 40.
